

Prof. Volker Quaschning

Volker Quaschning has been a professor for regenerative energy systems at the University of Applied Sciences HTW Berlin since 2004, spokesman for the Renewable Energies course and heads the solar storage systems research group. Volker Quaschning did his doctorate in the field of photovoltaics and habilitated on climate-friendly energy supply and is considered one of the leading energy transition experts in Germany. He is the author of several successful specialist books on renewable energies and climate protection, which have been translated into various languages ??and are considered standard works. His latest non-fiction book, Energierevolution JETZT, is on the Spiegel bestseller...

Topics

Climate Change, Environment & Energy, CSR, Climate & Sustainability, Globalization, Politics & Economy, Politics, Policies & Economy, Society, Transformation, Innovation & Technology, Trends, Future & Science

Languages

German

